

NEW FROM AXIOS PRESS

BOOKS TO HELP YOU THINK THROUGH YOUR PERSONAL VALUES

$15 (softcover)
ISBN 978-1-60419-006-9

The Big Spenders was Lucius Beebe's last and, many think, best book.

In it he describes the lavish spending of the Gilded Age, not from a puritanical perspective, but like a theater critic.

$12 (softcover)
ISBN 978-1-60419-004-5

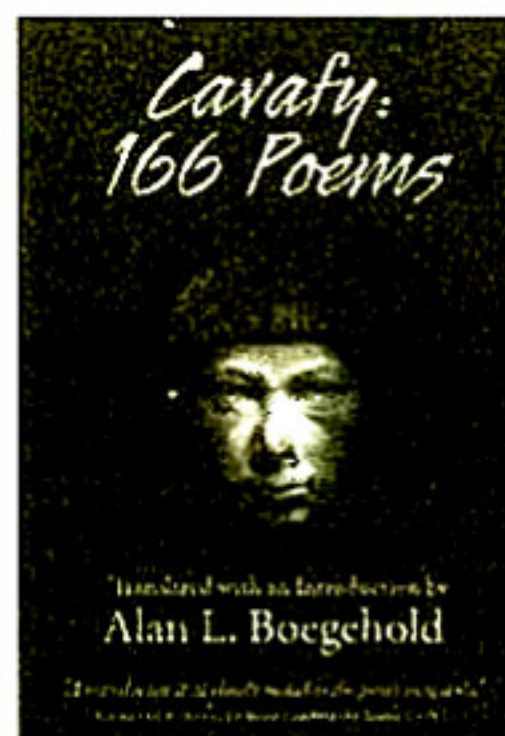

In Bitter Lemons, a world famous novelist paints unforgettable pictures of the sunlit villages, mountains, and seas of Cypress — punctuated by growing political violence.

$15 (softcover)
ISBN 978-1-60419-007-6

From FDR's New Deal until the Vietnam War, Alsop was one of America's most influential journalists.

Alsop was both an esthete and an acute political observer. He knew intimately everyone who mattered in American politics, and was especially close to John and Jacqueline Kennedy.

$18 (hardcover)
ISBN 978-1-60419-005-2

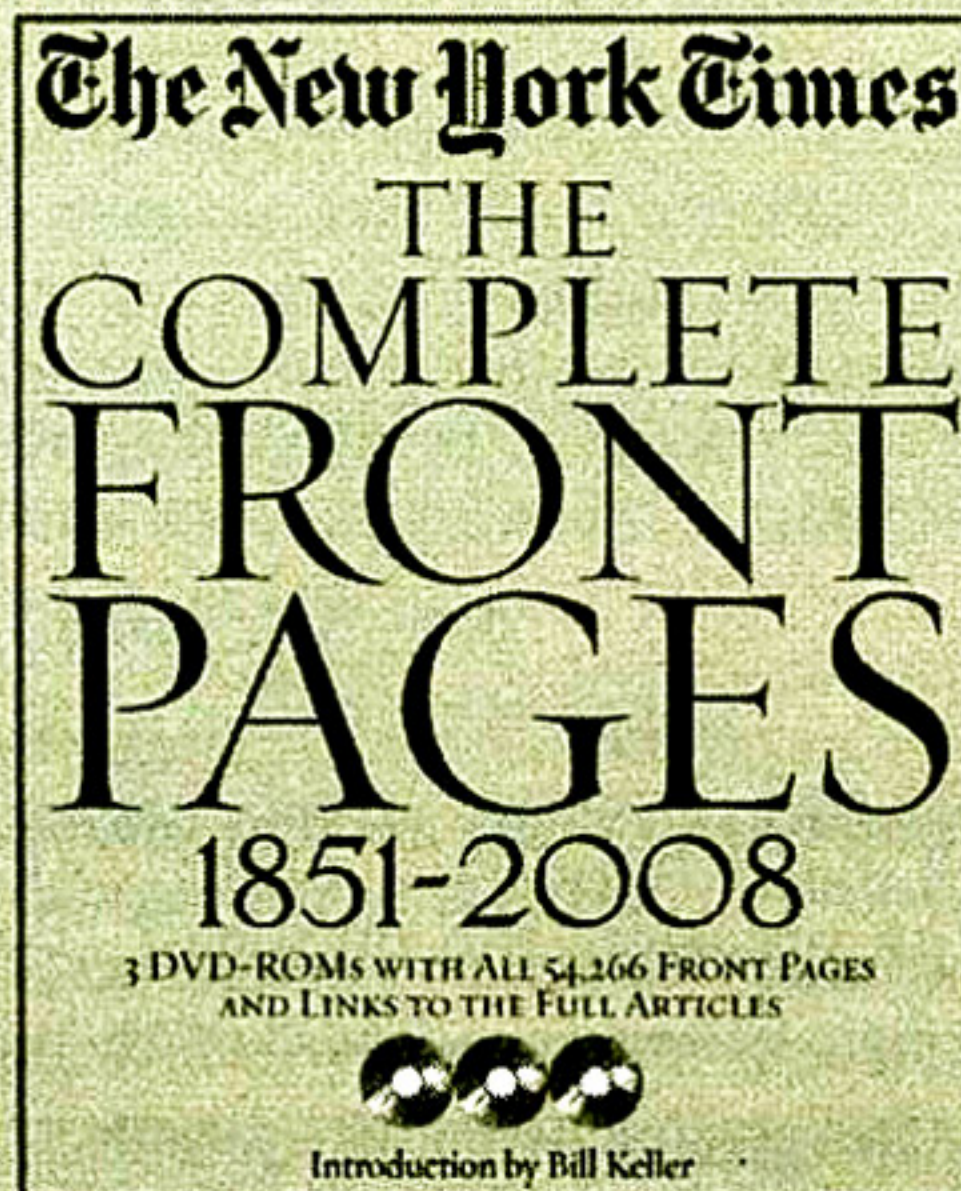

Most of Cavafy's important poetry was written after age 40, and none of it was published in the author's lifetime. Today Constantine Cavafy is considered the greatest of modern Greek poets.

This volume includes a fresh translation by noted classical scholar Alan Boegehold, a translation that captures the style as well as the meaning of the Greek, and a foreword discussing Cavafy's distinctive values.

www.axiospress.com AVAILABLE FROM LEADING BOOKSELLERS EVERYWHERE

An innovative way to explore the past 150 years— as it happened.

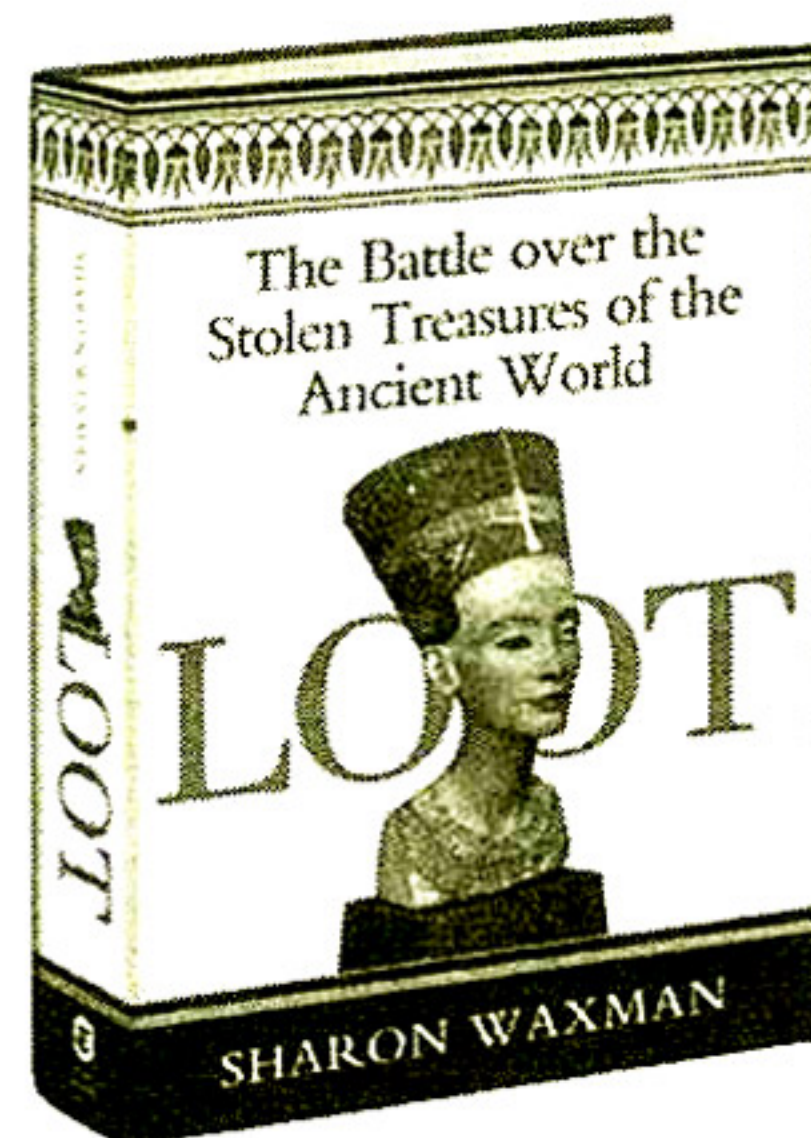

For the first time ever, all 54,267 front pages are in one magnificent package: a book with 300 front-page reproductions, 3 DVDs with every front page— plus access to the entire New York Times archive from 1851 until now.

Includes a 20% discount coupon for the OBAMA election front page or for any other Times Keepsake Front Page Reprint at The New York Times Store.

PUBLISHED BY BLACK DOG & LEVENTHAL
HARDCOVER/$60

The New York Times
nytstore.com

ORDER NOW:
nytstore.com or call
(800) 671-4332.

“Vivid, witty, and delightful...”

—DOUGLAS PRESTON, author of The Monster of Florence

432 pages, hardcover $30.00
Includes color and black-and-white photos

Times Books/An imprint of Henry Holt and Company

ORDER NOW: nytstore.com
or call (800) 671-4332.

The New York Times
nytstore.com

Up Front

Toni Bentley, who reviews Akim Volynsky's "Ballet's Magic Kingdom" on the cover, performed with New York City Ballet in the 1970s and '80s. "Dancing for Balanchine, as one of his girls," she said in an e-mail message, "was all about getting one tendu right. Morning, noon and night, trying to get it right. He said if you could do this one movement well, you could dance anything. But now, the fact of having been in his world during his lifetime is really nothing less than a miracle. I do not know who, or what, I would be without his influence. He was, to me, a Sufi master who used ballet as the language for his lessons." About Balanchine's famous dictum "Don't think, just do," Bentley said: "This is quite the challenge, to leapfrog over one's demons. Great dancers have a kind of powerful physical intelligence that is not measurable by any known means — it is neither verbal, mathematical, nor emotional. But it is profound."

Bentley is finishing a book about Balanchine's "Serenade": "This ballet, to Tchaikovsky, is 75 years old this year and was the first ballet he made in America. It is about the evanescence of beauty, loss, sweetness and fate, a kaleidoscope through which one can view Balanchine carrying ballet from the 19th century through the 20th to the beyond — all in 32 minutes! And one can glimpse the many levels of his soul. Though he'd hate me saying that." The Editors

Online

PODCAST This week's schedule includes excerpts from a Book Review panel discussion with the novelist Joseph O'Neill, author of "Netherland"; Liesl Schillinger, a frequent Book Review contributor; and Dwight Garner, a book critic for The Times. Jennifer Schuessler has best-seller news, and Sam Tanenhaus is the host.

PAPER CUTS The Book Review's blog covers books and other forms of printed matter.

FIRST CHAPTERS Excerpts from "Water Dogs," by Lewis Robinson, and "The Possession," by Annie Ernaux.

BOOKS UPDATE E-MAIL Receive a selective overview of new book reviews and features every Friday.

nytimes.com/books